

Losing it

By Samaa Wakim & Samar Haddad King

Can you still hear the bombs? I can hear them.

Growing up in a war zone means living and breathing politics. The Palestinian choreographer and performer Samaa Wakim asks herself how these experiences impact her identity in a new solo performance - Losing It - which explores how the trauma of previous generations manifests in her own body through movement and sound.

In a journey towards the moment she began to fear for her freedom, the piece dives into her memories of growing up under occupation, exploring the various realities she lives in, and the fantasies she's created out of fear and hope in order to survive. As fear overtakes her, her world begins to disintegrate: the floor becomes unstable, and the sounds begin to warp, creating a world where reality and fantasy blur.

Created in conversation with a live score by Samar Haddad King (Artistic Director, Yaa Samar! Dance Theatre), the soundscape features field recordings taken throughout Palestine since 2010.

Accompanied by Wakim's vocals, the sounds that once caused fear and the sounds that once provided solace become woven together to the point where past and present cloud the future.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING

“ Losing it, récit chorégraphique de Samaa Wakim, convoque des souvenirs poignants qui s'entrechoquent avec la partition sonore jouée live par Samar Haddad King. “

IGOR HASEN
sceneweb.fr

”makes physical the anguish of conflict”

ALAN MEBAN
(Alan in Belfast, 2024)

“She keeps falling but doesn't give up... you could watch her for hours.”

“The performance is a string of states of tension. The soundscape, by Samar Haddad King makes a decisive contribution in the background and is correspondingly diverse.”

JÖRG WORAT,

PRODUCED BY

Yaa Samar! Dance Theatre (YSdT) creates invigorating performance and education programs that expand access to and promote understanding through - the arts. Founded in 2005 in New York City, YSDT has a repertoire of 30+ original works performed across NYC at venues such as Downtown Dance Festival, Gibney, Harlem Stage, Joyce SoHo, LaGuardia Performing Arts Center, Tribeca Performing Arts Center, Queens Museum and more; regionally; and abroad in 13 countries across four continents, including festivals such as Downtown Contemporary Arts Festival (Egypt), Nuit Blanche (Belgium), Ramallah Contemporary Dance Festival (Palestine), SIDance (South Korea), Spring Festival (Tunisia), Theater der Welt, Theaterformen (Germany). Since 2011, the company has worked transnationally between NYC and Palestine, and is committed to uniting diverse artists and audiences in the creative process, rooted in the belief that art should be liberating, transformative, and accessible to all. For more information, visit: www.ysdt.org.

Khashabi Theatre is an independent Palestinian theater in the city of Haifa. It was founded in 2011 as the artists collective Khashabi Ensemble. In 2015 the group secured a physical space in the Wadi Salib neighborhood that was emptied from the majority of its original inhabitants in 1948. Khashabi works towards a Palestinian society that freely practices art and creativity as a natural right, and strives to renew its cultural identity by placing independent culture front and center. Khashabi provides a space for artists to freely experiment, create, research and perform alternative forms of theater and art, and space where social, political and artistic taboos can be challenged, creating an invigorating creative environment based on cooperation and mutual support. www.khashabi.org

Festival Theaterformen is an annual international theater festival that presents 15-20 plays over 11 days every summer. The plays often deal with social themes and have generally not been produced in Germany, but in different countries and on different continents. The Artistic Director, Martine Dennewald, invites plays and artists to Lower Saxony. The festival wants to provide the visiting artists and the audience with an environment where no one is disadvantaged. The festival team wants to take critical action against discrimination.
